deep in the back of the storage room is a locked door with a man eager to get out. Mr. Walker walks up to the glass window and stands face to face with the Military man

THE MILITARY MAN
let me out of here

Mr. Walker looks to the orderlies

MR. WALKER
why is this man locked up here

ORDERLY
he's crazy...he actually likes whats happening here.

The Military man stares vaguely at Mr. Walker

THE MILITARY MAN
listen to me, i need you to open the door. That orderly behind you has the key just bust his face open and take it from him.

MR. WALKER
is it true what he says, do you really like things this way

The Military man's expression changes from angry to stern and ashamed

THE MILITARY MAN
The only thing I've ever been good at is being a soldier, and ever since the war ended I've been lost, out of place. Finally war has come back to me, it's right outside those doors and I should be at the front lines. I need this, even if it's just for tonight.

MR. WALKER
If I let you out will you help me save us?

THE MILITARY MAN
Depends, are you going straight into the heart of this war. Will you kill every one of those things in the name of freedom, are you trying to save us because it's the American way.

MR. WALKER
With every last breath in my body!

THE MILITARY MAN
Then I'm in!

Mr. Walker is amazed by this man.

MR. WALKER
who are you?

THE MILITARY MAN
Me!?I'm America's first born son.

Mr. Walker knows that this man is a true American hero and will help him win this war.

MR. WALKER
hey how'd they even get you in here in the first place?

THE MILITARY MAN
they said there would be cookies.....I'm a diabetic

Mr. Walker laughs!
